Victorious ALBERT

PICTURES: CAMERA PRESS, CORBIS, LFI, REX, SIMON ROWE, STEVE BENBOW

When the Bafta awards are handed out next year, it will be a major surprise if Albert Finney does not collect one for his tour de force as Winston Churchill in The Gathering Storm, the BBC film first transmitted in July this year.

If Finney does collect a Bafta, it will mark a further step in what amounts to a professional rehabilitation. Twenty odd years ago, The New Yorker's celebrated film critic Pauline Kael waspishly wrote, in her review of a film called Looker, that the man once hailed as the greatest actor of his generation was guilty of 'the laziest performance by a star ever recorded on film'. The sentiment was echoed by the director Alan Parker, who asserted at around the same time that, 'the most brilliant actor in the whole world now enjoyed lunch more than acting'.

Well, I can testify that Manchester-born Finney still does greatly enjoy lunch, having spent a long and enthralling lunchtime in his company. But if he did suffer a dip in form, he has recently been back on song, with an Oscar nomination for Erin Brockovich to show for it. I confront him, though, with the charge that he has never quite lived up to his early billing. After all, in 1963, when Tom Jones was released to huge acclaim, Life magazine declared that 'Albert Finney is sure to be a US matinee idol before the year is out,' while Show magazine proclaimed him 'heir apparent to the throne held by Laurence Olivier'.

'Who wants to be the second Olivier?,' says Finney, with a trace of irritation when I lob these quotes at him. 'I've known about 10 second Oliviers in my career. People still say it's time you did Lear, but I'm not sure I can be bothered any longer. More and more I think I should just have a nice time.'

He has had a nice time with a string of lovers that reportedly includes, deep breath ... Joan Baez, Carly Simon, Samantha Eggar, Billie Whitelaw, Jacqueline Bisset, Shelley Winters, Rita Moreno and Diana Quick, not to mention his ex-wives, Jane Wenham (mother of his only son, Simon, a film cameraman) and Anouk Aimée. It is, I remark, quite a list. 'I don't think they're all there,' he says, roguishly.

'It's not half the story.' So tell us ... Joan Baez? 'Ah, well, don't believe everything you read. I think we had a cuddle. I don't think there was any danger of any child-bearing.' Carly Simon? 'I'm not going to comment. You won't get half of them, dear. I'm not going to tell you. The list won't be published.' Shame.

Lawrie Masterson passes on the latest celebrity and industry murmurings from Tinseltown

LA CONFIDENTIAL

Happy wanderer

Mark Eccleston – as all travel reporters should, but few do – possesses an original turn of phrase. The new series of Travel Bug, he says, is intended to be a little more objective than most travel shows, the kind in which 'you find someone in a sarong having a flambéed meal'.

Eccleston prefers to tell it how it is. He is 37 now, and has travelled widely since he was a child. He reckons now to have visited most countries in the world, but not yet Cuba, which he longs to see. 'I am very keen on fishing,' he says. 'There is fantastic tropical fly-fishing there. And fantastic music.'

Is there anywhere he would like to revisit, and anywhere he would rather not? 'I wouldn't dash back to the Algarve,' he says unhesitantly. 'It felt claustrophobic to me. What space there is, is filled with golf courses. Bali I enjoyed enormously. It's the most beautiful place, and very mellow.'

Eccleston's travels have also helped his novel-writing ambitions. In South Africa he came across Muti, a practice which 'involves herbal medicine, but at its most extreme end involves the sale of human body parts'. With that in mind he started writing a psychological thriller. 'I'm almost finished,' he says. 'It is set in Los Angeles. I've been to some of those big celebrity parties, so they feature, too.' The mind boggles.

That's Entertainment!

Torrie Wilson was brought up on the outskirts of nowhere in the America's Midwest, in the God-fearing town of McCall, Idaho. Her parents were decent, hard-working, church-going folk, who instilled a strong sense of right and wrong in their three sons and one daughter. Despite having three brothers, or perhaps because of it, Torrie was a girly girl. She played with dolls. She wore pink. She was by no stretch of the imagination a tomboy. Her mom hoped that she might one day become an accountant.

How did her parents take it, then, when she told them she was about to become a wrestler? 'I think my mom was a little shocked,' says Wilson, one of the big, big stars of World Wrestling Entertainment, who appears in the WWE Rebellion event at the Manchester Evening News Arena this month on Saturday 26th.

'It wasn't what she would have chosen. But she enjoys watching me now. And my brothers think it's cool. Although most people who know me still find it hard to believe.'

Wilson stumbled into wrestling after moving to Los Angeles, where she hoped to become an actress. A boyfriend was a big fan of WWE and so she accompanied him to a show one night. She enjoyed what she saw. Afterwards, backstage, someone looked her up and down and asked whether she fancied giving it a shot. She said she would. 'And those acting classes have helped a lot. It's like a soap opera. Every match has a storyline. But it hurts too. When someone punches you, it's a real punch.' What would she say, I ask provocatively, to someone who suggested that wrestling – particularly the popular bra-and-panties tag team affairs – ought to be beneath her dignity. 'I'd say,' she says, 'that they were an idiot.'

NEW JERSEY royals

The drama that's had us married to the mob is back with series four. Vicki Power whets the appetites of Sopranos fans for another helping of cannelloni and contract killings

NEW SERIES

The Sopranos

E4, Thursdays from 24th, 10.00pm

Tony Soprano

IN THE FOURTH SERIES, the depressed Don (James Gandolfini) looks set to get more trouble from both families – his mafia cohorts and his own flesh and blood, especially his disillusioned wife, Carmela (Edie Falco). 'Season one was about Tony and his mother,' says creator David Chase. 'Season two was about Tony and his sister. Season three was deliberately about Tony and Carmela as parents, so this year focuses on Tony and Carmela's marriage.'

And the Sopranos' marriage is looking shakier than Big Pussy Bonpensiero on his final boat ride. Tony's skirt-chasing nearly cost him dear last season when he had an affair with a sexy car saleswoman, Gloria Trillo, who turned out to be several layers short of a lasagne and threatened to tell Carmela.

At work, Tony's problems are expanding faster than his waistline. Capo Ralph Cifaretto (Joe Pantoliano) is such a loose cannon he makes the late Richie Aprile look like a boy scout, while Tony's sidekick Paulie Walnuts (Tony Sirico) is thinking about defecting to the New York mob. And Uncle Junior's (Dominic Chianese) recovery from illness may see him wanting control of the New Jersey mob again.

Tony's only respite comes from chats with his shrink, Dr Jennifer Melfi (Lorraine Bracco). But last year saw Melfi wrestling with her own demons. After she was raped by a man who walked free on a technicality, Melfi knew that Tony Soprano could mete out the punishment the legal system couldn't. She only had to say the word – but she didn't.

Carmela Soprano

Even more than the sticky problems of her marriage, kids and what colour to lacquer her nails, Carmela struggles with her conscience. Last year she opened up to a shrink. The response was blunt: leave Tony, or you're his accomplice. Carmela began to consider a career move, albeit one that might be considered only a short step up from crime – becoming an estate agent. Her drive towards self-sufficiency may lead her to do the unthinkable – stop being married to the mob.

Christopher Moltisanti

Although Christopher (Michael Imperioli) became a fully-fledged 'made guy' last year, it wasn't the dream job he'd hoped for. Paulie won't cut him any slack over late payments and doesn't trust Christopher further than he could throw Big Pussy's corpse. This season sees Christopher drawn in, unwittingly, to the FBI's infiltration of the mob. The feds have given Agent Deborah Ciccerone an undercover assignment: get big hair and a Jersey accent and befriend Christopher's girlfriend Adriana (Drea de Matteo).

PICTURES: CORBIS, HBO/WARNER BROS, NANCY ROSE/RETNA

Meadow Soprano

Until now, Meadow Soprano (Jamie-Lynn Sigler) has been the brains and beauty of the Soprano family – and also its harshest critic. But even after Tony chased off Meadow's mixed-race Jewish boyfriend last year and supported the whacking of her other beau, Jackie Aprile Jr, the oldest Soprano child can't help returning to the fold. She was last seen in the season three finale embarrassing herself at Jackie's funeral party, somewhat the worse for drink, before storming out, with her father in hot pursuit.

Anthony Soprano, Jr

Last year saw AJ (Robert Iler) vandalising his school and getting expelled for cheating, causing his parents distress that a Soprano could have such little respect for authority. But Tony's decision to pack the sulky teen off to military school resulted in AJ suffering panic attacks just like his dad. Tony expressed his fears about AJ to Dr Melfi. With no talent for the family business and as much get-up-and-go as a plate of cannelloni, wondered Tony, how's this kid gonna survive?

Ralph Cifaretto

Unpredictably violent, loose-cannon Ralph's also harbouring a grudge against Tony: last year, Tony violated one of the mob's biggest taboos by punching Ralph. A made man never lays hands on another made man, but Tony snapped when Ralph beat a pole dancer to death. Tony made amends by awarding Ralph a captaincy; but the image of Jackie Jr, near enough his stepson, lying dead served as a stark reminder that Ralph is not to be crossed.

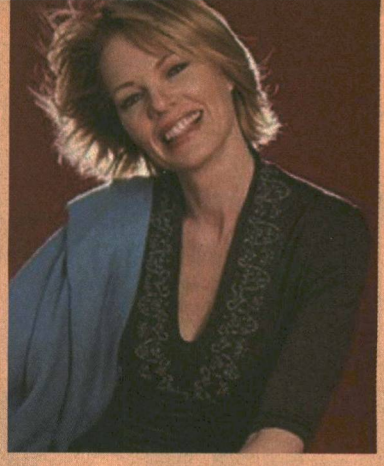
What lies beneath

If the examination of forensic evidence doesn't sound exciting then you probably haven't seen LivingTV's CSI: Crime Scene Investigation. Lawrie Masterson speaks to star Marg Helgenberger



MARG HELGENBERGER'S SECOND major task for the day was to get out there and sell her TV series through the media. Her first was to drop off her 11-year-old son, Hugh, for his first day at a new school.

'Balancing my personal and professional lives is a challenge, but it's a challenge for all mums, regardless of what they do for a living. My life might be a little more complicated as my hours aren't steady.'

Young Hugh's life has been even more complicated lately as his father and Helgenberger's husband, actor Alan Rosenberg, is working on another hit TV show, legal series The Guardian. 'He went to work today, too – big episode,' she says.

In CSI: Crime Scene Investigation, this year's Golden Globe and Emmy Award nominee for the series plays Catherine Willows, a street-smart forensics investigator who's a single parent. Willows is part of a Las Vegas CSI team led by veteran Gil Grissom (William Petersen). Their job is to find the missing pieces at the scene that will help solve the crime and to vindicate those who often cannot speak for themselves – the victims.

'Getting involved in these cases, in a fictional way, I've felt more compassionate towards the victims,' she says.

Shortly before taking the CSI role, Helgenberger, 43, played Patsy Ramsey in the mini-series Perfect Murder, Perfect Town (Sky Movies Max from Tuesday 22nd), about the still unsolved murder of child model JonBenet Ramsey. She says that case and the sensational OJ Simpson murder trial have, in a bizarre way, contributed to the success of CSI.

'Especially OJ, because that was televised daily and we all knew about the bloody glove and so on. The Ramsey case, having done my research on that, everything about it was down to the forensics – the scuff mark on the wall, the boot print that was near JonBenet's body, the unidentified DNA.'

Helgenberger is pleased that the police forensic experts are finally being presented in a heroic light: 'They've always been thought of as nerds and haven't been given their due. I've received letters from prisoners who've mentioned that if there were more criminologists out there just doing the proper work, there would be fewer people behind bars.'

Before starting the series Helgenberger spent a night on the job in Las Vegas, with a real-life CSI team, including the woman on whom Catherine Willows is loosely based, Investigator Yolanda McCleary. She remembers: 'We were called to where there had been a fender bender with these detectives, who were on their way to break up this big counterfeiting ring. Yolanda's job was to photograph the skid marks and so on. It delayed their whole case, but that's the kind of thing that has to be analysed.'

Helgenberger acknowledges that CSI is a glamorised and accelerated version of what really happens day to day. 'We get DNA results within hours, whereas I think in most crime labs it takes up to eight days.

'But, you know, who wants to see you sitting around waiting? So we take a few liberties.'

THE STAR FACTORY

Expect tears, tantrums and, yes, tunes, as Tina Ogle goes behind the scenes with the young hopefuls destined to become pop stars

NEW SERIES

Popstars: The Rivals Extra

ITV2, Saturdays, 8pm

A LONE WOMAN SMILES as she hands out leaflets outside the Glasgow Royal Concert Hall. To her left extends a snaking queue of young people shining with lip gloss (the girls) or sporting hair made mountainous with gel (the boys). They're lining up for the auditions to be in the new series, Popstars: The Rivals, and the woman knows she's onto a good thing. The service she's offering? Singing lessons.

Despite the beautifully sung scales and occasional pop standard that escape from the restless queue, many of these hopefuls could do with some tuition. Only a small proportion will get past the pre-audition panel to see judges Pete Waterman, Geri Halliwell and Louis Walsh (left). And only a smattering of those will be part of the final 120 in London.

After the phenomenal success of Pop Stars and Pop Idol, it was decided that this format still had plenty of life left in it. The twist this time is that a girl band and a boy band will be formed and the hastily manufactured popsters will race each other to the Christmas number one spot.

That's the theory anyway. For Pete Waterman it's proving a trickier task than even Pop Idol. 'It's bloody hard,' he says. 'On the first day the reality that you have to find five Gareth Gates, but not Gareth Gates, hits. Two hours in, you think, "My God, this is impossible." He's six foot, the other kid I liked is five foot two – you can't put them together, it'll look ridiculous.'

In the holding area, where the hopefuls wait to be led off in groups of 10 to sing, the atmosphere is nervy and subdued. When Waterman strides in followed by a camera, the energy levels pick up. He launches into his spiel: 'When you get in there, don't freeze. And if you're going to be bad be bloody awful and at least we can have a laugh.' Nervous laughter follows and then clapping as he swaggers out, a man clearly loving his time in the limelight.

Four girls, all students or ex-students of musical theatre at Motherwell College, share their thoughts on this process. Amanda, Nicola, Hailidh and Lisa all blagged their way in this morning, having missed the telephone audition deadline. Nicola is fighting nerves, although she's used to the audition process: 'But this is my first kind of pop starry audition. Deep breathing, that's what it's all about.' Hailidh is running through her chosen song, Genie in a Bottle, while Lisa hasn't made her mind up yet what she's doing. 'I'll just open my mouth and see what comes out,' she says optimistically.

A couple of hours later and Lisa and Amanda haven't made it through to the star panel but Hailidh and Nicola have. The latter pair come out looking a bit shell-shocked. 'I was crying when I came out,' admits Hailidh. 'They said I had a good voice but that I sang the wrong song.' Louis Walsh

Pitch perfect

Fans of Dream Team have been on tenterhooks since last season's fiery coach-crash finale. But the wait is over. The top soccer soap is back – and with some new signings. Interviews: Nick Griffiths

Dream Team

Sky One, Sundays from 6th, 8.00pm

We left the Harchester United coach at the bottom of a short incline, off a British motorway, in flames. The team's European dreams lie not in tatters but in cinders. Who would survive and who would perish? Dream Team's series five cliffhanger stands up there with the fire at the Rovers Return and the alien abduction in The Colbys.

Shortly afterwards Terry Kiely noted of his character, Karl 'Fletch' Fletcher: 'He's always looking after himself, so if there's a tiny chance of him making it, he'll grab it. And he won't be running back into the coach to save anyone else.'

All for one, and everyone for himself. Scott Mean (whose

had said she might be the next Elaine Paige though, which seems to have softened the blow of not making it to the next stage. Neither did Nicola, but both agree it was a positive experience.

Also coming out disappointed from the star panel were Christopher and Daniel. Christopher is still reeling from a comment by Louis Walsh. 'He said I'd just ruined a good song, which I thought was a wee bit harsh.' Daniel was told he had a lot of potential but is also shaken up: 'My heart was nearly pounding out of my chest, I wouldn't wish it on my worst enemy.'

While these youngsters choose to put themselves through this process, is compassion a requisite for the judges? Louis Walsh certainly thinks so: 'You need it. I'm trying to be honest as nicely as possible but that doesn't always work.' Waterman explodes theatrically at the suggestion: 'Not at all!' he says. 'There's no such word in this job as compassion. If you're crap, you're crap.' You have been warned.

character, Robbie Walsh, plays a more prominent role this season) explains, 'Footballers are quite shallow people.' And he should know, having played professionally for Bournemouth and West Ham.

Come series six of Sky One's Dream Team and Robbie Walsh has been plucked from the Harchester reserves to take centre stage with all the other beautiful people, in 32 new episodes. Murder, turmoil, love triangles – the usual suspects.

Is this really de rigeur for the average Premiership side? 'That's like asking, "Is a soap realistic?"' suggests Mean. 'Soaps have to take things to extremes. Our writers couldn't concentrate on the day-to-day running of a club because it'd be too boring.'

It's the same behind the scenes, among the footballers' wives. Angela Saunders, who plays Tash, the wife of goalkeeper Jamie Parker, is also a footballer's girlfriend in real life, dating Spurs midfielder Stephen Clemence. 'My life at home is very normal,' says Saunders. 'I walk the dogs, cook useless dinners. If Dream Team just had me doing that it wouldn't be very interesting. So everything's extreme.'

Thus did we leave Tash Parker, on the verge of giving birth (no, it wasn't quick-fling Monday Bandele's child, we had discovered) in a rain-sodden car park, with her husband among coach wreckage, possibly deceased. When series six kicks off she will be with pram, which is handy because Saunders, having mixed socially with various Spurs wives, notes that, 'Most of the talk's about babies.'

Ratings are good. Just as the ITV equivalent, Footballers' Wives, hooked viewers and attracted the tabloid gaze, so Sky One's Dream Team regularly puts over half a million bums on seats and its female cast adorn the glossies in their skimpies.

The new series promises three new babes to bolster the ranks, among them Emma Harding, as tough HUFC TV reporter Tara Keane. Three weeks into filming, before her episodes have even aired, she has already received fan mail.

In preparation, Harding has endured photo shoots for two lads' magazines, with more to come. Her experience as a model will have boosted her confidence, as will her appearances in Hollyoaks. 'You just try to keep yourself in the best condition you can. Try to have self-belief. It's quite difficult sometimes.'

> "Being a babe is about being as natural as possible. Obviously there's your genetics and you get blessed or whatever, but I think a lot of people try too hard"

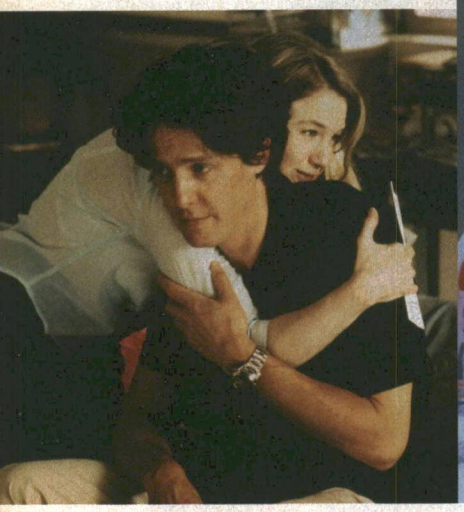
Angela Saunders is well used to the attention and to the prevalent gorgeousness. You wonder if she ever looks around Harchester's fictitious offices and muses, 'Where did all the ugly people go?'

'It is a beautiful show,' she admits. 'We can't complain. Working in that environment is great for us, seeing beautiful guys and beautiful girls every day. It makes it a lot easier to get up in the mornings.'

A favourite of the lads' mags, Saunders could be considered a professional babe. Could she give tips for any prospective babes? 'As in beauty tips? I just think being a babe is about being as natural as possible. Obviously there's your genetics and you get blessed or whatever, but I think a lot of people try too hard.'

Saunders has even featured in one of those Top 100 Sexiest Women polls. 'I was number 85 or something. But it's all a laugh. I don't take anything like that too seriously. Good job, really, at number 85!'



Keeping up with MISS JONES

American actress Renée Zellweger had to transform herself to bring to life the story of lovelorn English diarist Bridget Jones, based on Helen Fielding's bestseller. And she pulled it off spectacularly, writes Garth Pearce

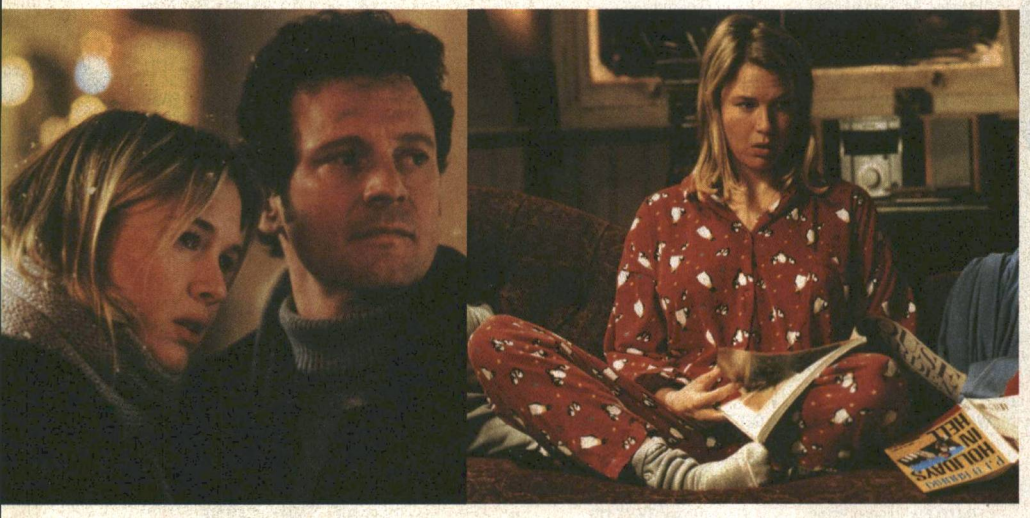
RENÉE ZELLWEGER DOES not look like the sort of woman who enjoys controversy. She is strikingly pretty rather than beautiful, blushes easily and likes to keep her blue eyes gazing at the pavement rather than looking towards the stars.

But she was prepared to put herself in the firing line, to play Bridget Jones in a film version of the fictional bestselling diary of a thirtysomething English publisher's assistant who is riddled with insecurities about men, weight and work.

She boldly agreed to tackle a role that critics furiously declared should definitely have gone to a homegrown girl. And she agreed to put on 15lbs in weight, which would have had many Hollywood actresses positively fainting at the prospect.

The result? Nothing less than a triumph. This is one of those movies which more than lives up to the novel, by author Helen Fielding, and resulted in a deserved best actress Oscar nomination for the unassuming and very pleasant Zellweger.

'I knew that being chosen for the part would cause a fuss. So I just put that to one side and got on with the whole thing my own way'



'I had to transform myself,' she says. 'I had dialect classes every day and, more important, had to think English and speak in an English accent at all times. I had a carefully controlled diet – lots of pizzas and cakes.

'It also meant a complete cultural change, from whistling Spice Girls songs at the weekends to shopping at Harvey Nichols. I was even able to get a job, in the publicity department of Picador books.

'It was set up for me, in secret, to work there for a couple of weeks. I posed as someone seeking work experience in publishing and – I am delighted to say – was able to get away with it. I even attended a book launch, surrounded by journalists, without one of them recognising me.

'I knew that being chosen for the part would cause a fuss. It is like a favourite American role being played by a British girl. So I just put that to one side and got on with the whole thing my own way.'

Doing things her own way included a risky move in 1993 to Los Angeles from her home state of Texas, following a slender acting career and degree in English literature from the University of Texas.

The high point had been an appearance as a white trash character called Starlene in the oddly titled film, Love and a .45. Since there was little sign of improvement on the career front, she earned much of her money working in bars.

'I cleaned up after young Hollywood, carrying cases of beer and stocking up the freezer,' she recalls. 'I could just about pay the rent in a grungy little one-room apartment, but could not afford things like a television.

'I did not know whether my acting career was going to lead anywhere, but I was going to hop on the road and see where it took me. It was not a matter of moving to Los Angeles and saying: "Hey, I'm here." Nobody cares and that's the toughest part.'

But her big break was not far off. Zellweger was cast opposite Tom Cruise as single mother and Girl Friday Dorothy Boyd, ahead of Winona Ryder and Bridget Fonda, in the film Jerry Maguire. 'My life changed in one day, from that moment onwards,' she reports.

She has since conducted a high-profile romance with Jim Carrey, after working with him in the film Me, Myself & Irene. She now laments the end of the affair, Bridget-like, and, rather sadly, has shed all the weight that made her such a shapely girl.

It was a wise choice to put a distance of 5500 miles between herself and her Los Angeles home, since Bridget's very British thoughts seem light years away from the Californian culture. Indeed, Bridget's lifestyle is almost gleefully unhealthy – guzzling Chardonnay by the gallon, smoking cigarettes by the pack and bingeing on mince pies or doughnuts might not go down so well in LA.

'It is easy to imagine the emotions of Bridget, wherever you are from,' she reasons. 'What woman over 30 isn't concerned about the same things – men, body-image, work and relationships? I know I am.'

Almost Famous

Sky Premier, Tuesday 8th, 10.05pm

A sweet-natured celebration of the Seventies rock scene as seen through the inexperienced eyes of 15-year-old William (Patrick Fugit), a budding journalist who finds himself on tour with next-big-thing band Stillwater to write a feature for Rolling Stone magazine. The incidents and characters are fantastically well observed and the film has an irrepressibly exciting feel for the period – none of which is surprising as writer-director Cameron Crowe drew liberally on his own youthful experiences as a scribe for Rolling Stone. The awe that revelatory newcomer Fugit felt at making his first big-screen movie translates perfectly to his character's wide-eyed wonder at being on tour with the band.

Best in Show

Sky Premier, Tuesday 19th, 8.00pm

This attempts to do for pedigree dog shows what sublimely funny rock 'mockumentary' This Is Spinal Tap did for heavy metal bands; while it may not achieve the same degree of quotability as that earlier cult classic, there are still enough hilarious highlights here to exercise the old chuckle muscles. The faultlessly cast ensemble includes Spinal Tap stars Christopher Guest (who also directs) and Michael McKean, Parker Posey and American Pie's Eugene Levy (Guest's co-screenwriter).

CLASSICS TO CATCH

Invasion of the Body Snatchers

Carlton Cinema, Saturday 5th, 11.00pm

A product of the paranoid political climate of the Fifties, a decade which saw daring Cold War themes being sneaked into sci-fi flicks, Don Siegel's Invasion of the Body Snatchers ranks as one of the most memorable and influential genre pictures of that period. Some inhabitants of a small town start to realise that their spouses, friends and relatives are acting strangely out of character. Thanks to its fine direction, the film attained a sense of nightmarish pulp poetry. It was always going to be a brave move remaking this masterpiece, but in his 1978 version, playing on Carlton Cinema, Philip Kaufmann pulls it off, building a sense of escalating panic with aplomb. While set in the larger environs of San Francisco, Kaufman's adaptation seems somehow more uncomfortably intimate than the original. Donald Sutherland stars.

Point Blank

TCM, Thursday 10th, 9.00pm

While many agreed that director John Boorman's debut film Catch Us if You Can, a vehicle for British beat combo The Dave Clark Five, was assembled with a degree of panache unusual for a teen pop movie, it still didn't prepare viewers for the stylistic assault of his follow-up – the fractured, arthouse Hollywood thriller Point Blank. The term anti-hero may as well have been coined for Lee Marvin's icy character, who embarks on a violent programme of vengeance after being double-crossed out of some Mob loot by his partner.

The Ballad of Cable Hogue

Sky Cinema, Sunday 27th, 2.00pm

Tough guy director Sam Peckinpah's bittersweet, western comedy was sandwiched between his two most controversial and confrontational films, The Wild Bunch and Straw Dogs. But there are no scenes of balletic slow-mo carnage in Cable Hogue. Instead you get Jason Robards in his warmest role as a drifter who discovers a waterhole in the desert. As with many westerns of the Seventies, it paints an elegiac picture of the passing of the Old West.

LOVING THE LAND OF OZ

I just want to say that E4 is a great channel with great programmes, such as Six Feet Under, Big Brother, Faking It, Dawson's Creek, Friends and Oz!

I am really into these programmes and particularly Oz, which I only started getting into in the latest series. I was wondering, how many series are there? Will E4 show all of them? If the whole series is released on video, I would love to buy them all! Thanks E4, keep getting those great shows from HBO!

PS, Is there a website for Oz and all my favourite E4 programmes? Sorry for all the questions!

David Lee, email

An E4 spokesperson replies: 'Series four of Oz is on E4 at the moment, every Friday at 10.00pm, but the new series (five) will premiere only on E4 from Friday 27 September (10.00pm). The previous series have all aired on E4 since the launch in January 2001. Check out the HBO website (www.hbo.com) for more on Oz, or you can find plenty of information about the E4 programmes at www.channel4.com/entertainment'

THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES

Thanks for showing Escape from East Berlin again on TCM (4 July). As a large percentage of the population lived through the Cold War era, I am sure a follow-up would be well viewed. Game, Set and Match, a three-part story from the mid-Eighties, or Berlin Blues, a film from about the same time, would be perfect!

DREAMING OF MORE

Dream Team is one of the best programmes I've ever watched. And during the summer I have really been hooked on watching it. You can imagine my disappointment when I found out that it isn't repeated later on in the day, or on the weekend, so that now school has started up again I will miss it, since it is on at 1.30pm.

So, do you know if it will be repeated at another time of day, because I'd hate to think that I'd miss Dream Team and all the sexy fellas in it. Also, do you know if Dream Team will ever be shown again from the first episode, or if you can buy them on video because I would love to see them all. Thank you.

Gemma Richardson, Birmingham

Bare-chested jester: Johnny Knoxville in Jackass

A Sky One spokesperson responds: 'Sky One is thrilled you're such a fan of the show. You'll be pleased to hear that there is a brand new series of Dream Team starting on Sunday 6th, 8.00pm, which will feature gorgeous new signings and steamier storylines than ever before! However, there are currently no plans to show repeats from old series, and at the moment there are no plans for a video release.' Don't miss our special feature on pages 6-7!

OPPORTUNITY KNOXVILLE

I'm a huge fan of the show Jackass on MTV. I've watched every episode of the first and second series at least twice and I want to know, do they have a new series coming out on MTV and, if so, when?

Jenny Ackerley, Greater Manchester

An MTV spokesperson replies: 'Yes, Jenny, we will have some brand new Jackass specials premiering on MTV in a few months' time. These will probably be shown around the same time as the UK cinema release of Jackass The Movie (starring Johnny Knoxville and co), which is due early next year. Also, if you like Jackass, you should check out Dirty Sanchez, coming to MTV later this year. It's like Jackass, but Welsh! We guarantee you'll laugh and be repulsed in equal measure!'

BUFFY TEASER

I am a huge fan of Buffy, yet came to it rather late, and so I have not seen many of the earlier episodes. Imagine my delight, then, when Sky One began to run the series from the very first episode.

Imagine, next, my dismay, when they run it something like this: season one; season two; skip season three (after all, why would anyone want to

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Ghostly visions

The paranormal programmes that have been showing on LivingTV recently have been great. I have an open mind on the subject and find it really interesting.

Most Haunted with Yvette Fielding (pictured) and Crossing Over with John Edward have made fascinating viewing. I do think there is something in the paranormal and afterlife argument.

Most Haunted does make one a bit nervous as they are investigating true accounts and there's nothing staged or fake about the programme. John Edward is very down-to-earth when doing his show and it's good to see what is said in Celebrity Crossing Over, as he doesn't know who the person is until he's finished the reading.

Clare Shedden, Tyne and Wear

A LivingTV spokesperson responds: 'You're not the only fan of LivingTV's paranormal programming, as our ratings have proved! In October we continue the paranormal theme, so catch 6ixth Sense Celebrity Special on Monday 28th, 8.30pm, as Colin Fry gives Daniella Westbrook a mind-blowing personal reading. On Halloween the Most Haunted team take on their biggest challenge to date as they report from Britain's spookiest village and ghost hunt live on air from 9.00pm! Also, catch Scream Team — The Blair Witch Project meets Scooby Doo — real people, real places, real fear.'

CROSSWORD NO 10 BY KNIGHT FEATURES

know how Angel came back from hell, or who this Faith is that everyone keeps talking about!); season four (currently airing): show an episode, miss an episode, so half of the storyline is missed. How did Spike come to be tied up in Giles's bathtub? When did Riley find out that Buffy was fast and strong?

Why, oh why, are they teasing me like this? Come on, Sky One, let us see it all!

Mrs B Goss, email

A Sky One spokesperson replies: 'Sky One would like to apologise to Buffy fans for any inconvenience, but unfortunately, due to unforeseen contractual issues, we are currently not able to play series three as first planned. We hope to play that series at a later date, however, and will inform fans as soon as we have some good news. So keep a look out in the press for further details.

Due to their content, some of the season four episodes are deemed to be inappropriate for a 6.00pm slot. It has not been possible to cut them to make them more suitable for this time, and so they have had to be omitted from this run.'

KLINGON TO HOPE OF DVD

I really enjoyed Enterprise. I have always been a fan of The Next Generation and Voyager but Enterprise is even better and the theme performed by Russell Watson is absolutely phenomenal. I just can't get enough of Enterprise – do you know if it is to be released on DVD?

Gordon Langley, email

Watch out for *Buffy (*aka Sarah Michelle Gellar). She's worth it!

Videos of the series are available to buy (try www.amazon.co.uk for instance), but unfortunately the distributors have no definite release date for the DVDs – possibly some time mid-2003.

PLEASE ADVISE ON BILLY'S DEMISE

Can anyone tell me how the character Billy died in Ally McBeal? I missed it. Thanks.

Mrs Avery, Surrey

Ally McBeal*'s Billy Thomas (played by Gil Bellows) died rather abruptly towards the end of season three from a brain tumour. However, being dead didn't stop him reappearing in ghostly form for the last ever episode of the series!

Fight School

Sky One, Thursdays from 10th, 9.00pm

In this new series, filmed entirely on location in China, 10 British amateur martial artists fulfil a lifelong dream – to train in an ancient martial arts school in China and compete in front of the Grandmaster.

The five chosen men and women face a gruelling schedule in which three martial arts experts supervise the contestants through a series of punishing challenges.

At the end of each show, the Grandmaster assesses the competitors and the worst-performing contestant fights three gladiatorial rounds against a fellow pupil nominated by the best performer. Defeat will mean almost certain elimination. In the final programme, contestants have been whittled down to three and they will have to triumph in yet more daunting ordeals to finally win the Fight School crown.

TRAVEL

The 2002 Travel Channel Viewers' Poll

In an effort to bring you the travel shows you want, Travel Channel is asking you to vote in a poll. And, as an added incentive, when you do so you will be entered into a competition to win a fantastic cruise holiday. Simply choose one of the following categories of programmes: People and Cultures, exploring the lives and cultures of the world; Wild Earth, celebrating the Earth's natural wonders; Tasting the World, revealing a country's spirit through its food and drink; Road, Rail and Sail, offering you travel from the perspective of the journey itself; and Travel Guides, which gives advice to travellers on a range of holidays.

TO ENTER: Along with your chosen category, listed above, tell Travel Channel your dream destination. Call 0901 277 2000* to vote, or, for more information, tune into Travel Channel or visit www.travelchannel.co.uk from 1st October.

* Calls cost 25p per minute, maximum call length is three minutes. Voting closes on 17 November 2002 and you can see the results on Sunday 24 November.

MUSIC

Live with Moby

MTV, Tuesday 8th, 8.00pm

Techno music's most visible star, Moby, embarks on a European tour this autumn. And MTV allows you first-hand access to his Rotterdam date this month with a live transmission of the gig (build-up programmes start at 6.30pm).

Famed for his live performances, the radical vegan and Christian's gigs, just like his music, are a new experience.

If witnessing his brilliance on TV isn't enough, MTV is offering Cable Guide readers the chance to see Moby in the flesh next month. We have three pairs of tickets for each of the following venues on Moby's UK tour in November. Belfast (16th), Manchester (23rd), Brighton (24th), London (28th) and Glasgow (30th). To enter, tell us: In which Dutch city will Moby be playing live on MTV this month?

Send your answer, with your name, address and daytime phone number, on an email to moby@scorpiomm.co.uk or on a postcard to Moby competition/ Scorpio PO Box 2176, London W1A 5TW, by 31 October 2002. Please state your venue preference. Travel costs not included. Full competition rules on page 13.

FILM

Halloween Season
Carlton Cinema, from Wednesday 30th

It's time to mingle with the ghosts and ghouls as Carlton Cinema's season of films for Halloween sets your spine tingling.

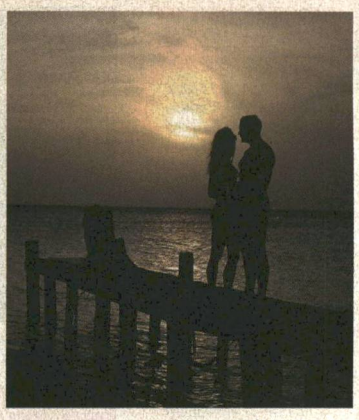
Highlights include Neil Jordan's eerie fantasy-horror The Company of Wolves (Wednesday 30th, 10.45pm), John Carpenter's chilling sequel Halloween II (Thursday 31st, 9.00pm) and The Dark Half, an adaptation of Stephen King's psychological horror (Thursday 31st, 10.35pm).

KIDS

The Powerpuff Girls
Cartoon Network, Monday 14th to Friday 18th, 7.00pm

Sugar, spice and everything nice is what Townsville's Professor Utonium puts into his formula to create the perfect little girl. But when he adds Chemical X, three supergirls, Buttercup, Bubbles and Blossom, spring to life.

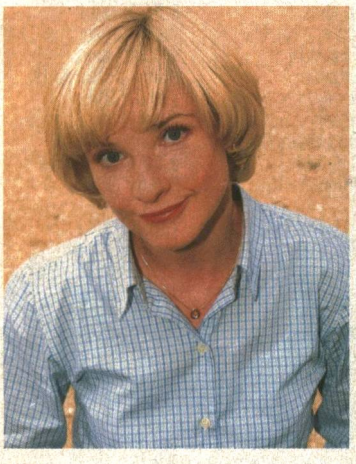
The first movie version of this Emmy Award-winning animated series hits cinemas in October, and Cartoon Network is warming up with a Powerpuff Girls fest featuring the very best episodes.



REALITY

Temptation Island
Sky One, Sundays from 13th, 10.00pm

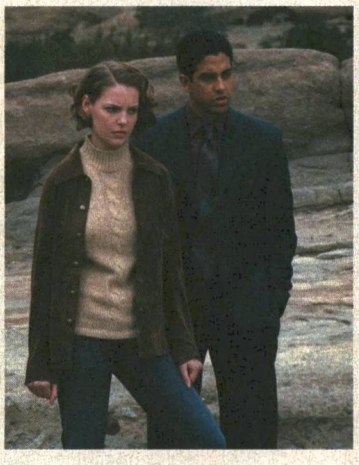
It's amazing what the offer of two weeks on a remote desert island will make people do. In this, the second UK series of Temptation Island, presented by Ed Hall, four couples travel to the exotic island of Koh Samui in Thailand to face the ultimate challenge of trust and fidelity. Separated into two resorts, the couples are surrounded by 11 male and 11 female tempters and their relationships are put to the test.



FACTUAL

Celebrity Extra: Funny Women
LivingTV, Sunday 20th, 8.00pm

As part of Breast Cancer Awareness Month, LivingTV is broadcasting this exclusive stage show featuring 30 of the funniest and talented women in showbiz. Live from London's Palace Theatre, Tania Bryer presents a top line-up including Jane Horrocks (above), Maureen Lipman and Cat Deeley. The film Between Mother and Daughter (Wednesday 23rd, 10.00pm) continues the theme of the month.



DRAMA

Roswell
Sky One, Thursday 3rd, 8.00pm

Three seasons on and it's time to say farewell to the US teen sci-fi series centred on three escaped aliens posing as local teenagers.

Max, his sister Isabel and his best friend Michael have so far avoided capture, but in this last episode, Graduation, the authorities are closing in. Max's girlfriend, Liz, has a premonition showing herself, Max, Michael and Isabel being killed and the group decide to leave town.

MUSIC

Bel Canto: Superstar Tenors of the 20th Century
Performance, Wednesdays, 7.00pm

Long before there were pop stars, similar hysteria was evoked by the stars of opera. This series homes in on the tenors who packed out concert halls and sold millions of records in the early days of recording. Featuring rare archive footage and in-depth interviews, each week tells a different story, including that of Italian Enrico Caruso, who wowed audiences at the turn of the century.

TO THE POINT

DISNEY CHANNEL KIDS AWARDS 2002
Disney Channel, Sunday 13th, 1.00pm
Joining the list of stars performing at the fifth annual Disney Kids Awards bash will be the newly created Star Ticket band – and it will surely be a test of their talents in front of the12,000-strong crowd. Disney Channel is unencrypted for the weekend, so even if you don't normally subscribe, you can savour the whole celeb-lishous shebang!

CHARLIE'S ANGELS
UK Gold, weekdays, 12noon, 5.00pm
Nostalgic thirtysomethings are in for an ironic treat this month as UK Gold brings back those high-kicking female crimebusters from the decade that fashion forgot. Seventies TV favourite Charlie's Angels was a huge hit with youth audiences because Jill, Sabrina and Kelly (the definitive, dream ticket line-up with Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith) appealed as much to girls as to boys.

LOUIS THEROUX'S WEIRD WEEKENDS
UK Horizons, Thursday 3rd, 12.30am
While Theroux's explorations of America's underbelly are outrageously funny, they are also admirably non-judgmental and, at their best, demonstrate a genuine compassion for the outsider. In this edition, our game, geek-next-door host embarks on an eye-opening investigation of the adult movie industry, even bagging a walk-on role in one production.

BEHIND THE MUSIC: NEIL DIAMOND
VH1, Mon 14th, 9.00pm
One of America's finest singer-songwriters, Neil Diamond's rich, smoky delivery is as unmistakable as his intimate, identifiable lyrics and anthemic choruses. Among his many perfectly crafted classics are The Monkee's hit I'm a Believer, I am ... I Said and Sweet Caroline. In short, he's the perfect subject for this excellent season.

VH1

6.00am All the Number Ones: 00s A retrospective countdown of all the classic tracks since the beginning of the millennium. The summer of 2000 saw the chart battle between Spiller and Victoria Beckham, and also paved the way for a disco and 1980s revival in music and fashion. This year has seen the number one stars getting younger, as S Club 7 became S Club when Paul left to join a nu-metal band and the S Club Juniors came along to steal the show. The boy band phenomena has continued in the shape of Blue, while Kylie Minogue is still enjoying more chart success. This 13-hour selection of tracks offers viewers the chance to see all the recent battles for the number one spot.

Charming, debonair, knowledgeable, unflappable – Des Lynam is the quintessential sports presenter. And you can see him in action hosting ITV2's Champions League coverage. Interview: Brian Viner

A fine Lynam

DES LYNAM IS ONE of those people who can sip the frothiest cappuccino without ever ending up with froth around his mouth. Maybe the moustache soaks it up. Whatever, in person as on screen, he is effortlessly debonair. Nothing appears to ruffle him, including the charge – not shared here, I hasten to add – that, having recently turned 60, he's not quite the force he was. It seems absurd to talk of a sports presenter as a force, and yet consider this: in a poll a few years ago to determine who we would like to elect president in the event of the monarchy being abolished, he emerged top.

We are the only customers in a west London cafe, close to where he lives. Lynam tells me that he is aware of the criticism that his legendary unflappability, his matchless ability to find the 'mot juste', no longer captivates the nation. 'There are some people in the press who still seem to begrudge the move [his 1999 switch from the BBC to ITV]. They say, "Maybe old Des has lost the plot. Let's write that he's lost the plot." But I don't think I have. I do it the way I've always done it.'

He joined ITV because he wanted to present live football, not dreaming, after all those years on Match of the Day, that he would also wind up presenting a Saturday night Premier League highlights programme. Indeed, he confesses to mixed feelings when ITV wrested from the Beeb the right to show Premiership highlights; apart from anything else, he had quite fancied having his Saturday nights back. 'Although I now realise,' he says, 'that Saturday night is the worst night of the week to go out. The restaurants are full, there are hundreds of people wandering around ...'

Besides, it is still the European Champions League that gives him the biggest kick. 'The Champions League is the best football around, better than the World Cup,' he ventures. He won't be drawn into predicting a winner. 'Manchester United are desperate to win because the final is at Old Trafford. And it's about time Arsenal kicked a bit of butt in Europe, isn't it? When you look at that team, 10 of them played in the World Cup, which is amazing. There's [the 2001-2 champions] Real Madrid, although it's difficult to do it two years running. I think one of the Italian clubs might have a good go this year.'

The Champions League, he adds, is increasingly a misnomer. 'It is not the right name. It's not the Champions League, it's a good clubs league. They should have kept calling it the European Cup in my view; the fact that it's a league process doesn't matter. And where it leaves the Uefa Cup I'm not quite sure. That's very much second-rate. In fact it was for the seconds and thirds, but now it seems to be for the sevenths, eighths and ninths. I can't be bothered with that any more.'

This season, ITV1 and ITV2 will be sharing live Champions League coverage. The viewing figures, adds Lynam, shows that it is not just him who gets a big kick from top European games.

'Last year, in terms of live football audiences, we had nine out of the top 10. It does very good business. And the one we didn't get was ninth, an FA Cup match on the BBC.'

It still seems odd hearing Lynam refer to the BBC as the opposition. He started with the Corporation in 1967, as a local radio reporter. And even he has almost forgotten some of his earlier incarnations, as a radio commentator on boxing and tennis. So, given his close involvement with sport over more than 30 years, I invite him to nominate the five events that have gripped him the most.

'They say, "Maybe old Des has lost the plot." But I don't think I have. I do it the way I've always done it'

'Muhammad Ali v George Foreman in Kinshasa, [the former] Zaïre, 1974 [the so-called Rumble in the Jungle],' he says, without hesitation. 'I followed Ali around a bit in the Seventies, and interviewed him quite a lot for BBC radio. They thought I was a genius because I kept getting brilliant interviews, but of course a monkey could have stuck a microphone in front of him and got a brilliant interview.

'Another would be John McEnroe v Björn Borg in the 1981 Wimbledon final. And Manchester United v Bayern Munich in the [1999] European Cup Final. And a very personal one would have to be the 1983 FA Cup Final [when his beloved Brighton & Hove Albion held Manchester United to a 2-2 draw, and nearly snuck a winner in extra-time. They were beaten 4-0 by United in the replay].

'How many's that? Four? The last one has to be an Olympic Games, the 800-metres final at the 1980 Moscow Olympics, which Steve Ovett won with Sebastian Coe second. I was there, trackside ...' Naturally.

DANNY MILLS

That Leeds United players are enjoying a higher than usual international profile is, Mills believes, good news for the England squad. It also reflects the inherent quality of the Elland Road outfit

THERE WAS AN AIR of familiarity when I met up with the England squad for last month's friendly game with Portugal. Aside from the faces that had become a part of my life for our World Cup excursion this summer, to have four of my Leeds United team-mates selected by Sven-Göran Eriksson for the game reflects well on the club and speaks volumes for the quality we have at Elland Road.

At international level, success is often built around a nucleus of players who perform together at club level. In recent years, the England side has been full of players from Manchester United, Liverpool and Arsenal, but the progression of Lee Bowyer, Jonathan Woodgate, Paul Robinson and Alan Smith this season could suggest a shift in personnel at the highest level.

Smithy, in particular, showed his undoubted credentials with a fantastic header against the Portuguese and it was apt that his opportunity was provided from the right foot of Bowyer.

It's up to others to assess my own performance, but I felt comfortable with it and the fact that Eriksson withdrew me from the field after 45 minutes was, I hope, an indication that the management were happy enough with my contribution. I am not taking my place in the England set-up for granted, but I do feel like an integral part of the squad now and I won't be giving up the right-back spot easily.

Yet the key for all the selected Leeds players, indeed all the players in the squad, is to maintain a level of consistency at club level that justifies inclusion for the forthcoming European Championship qualifiers against Slovakia and Macedonia. Our start to the Premiership season can be best described as indifferent, but with a new manager still making an impression on the team and our pattern of play, it was always going to be difficult to find consistency and success straight away.

Having cruised through our opening two games of the season, back-to-back defeats against Sunderland and Birmingham at the end of August provided a wake-up call for us all and prompted Terry Venables to call his first in-depth team meeting. He emphasised that hard work is just as important as any visually pleasing performance; in both games, we found ourselves harried to defeat, despite controlling for long spells. Hopefully we've learned from those results and can now go from strength to strength as we embark on our target of qualifying for next season's Champions League campaign.

Financially, it's an uncertain time for football, and that's especially evident in the Nationwide League, so are we about to see the situation replicate itself in the top-flight? There are those who say such a predicament would make for a more open and entertaining division, and the emphasis on Champions League qualification and the riches it brings increases dramatically.

In the meantime, the players have a responsibility to concentrate on what's happening now on the pitch. For the staff at Leeds United, it signals an important month of football with tough away games at Aston Villa and Middlesbrough sandwiched between our home encounter with Liverpool.

That match will give the clearest indication yet of how far we have progressed; because I believe that Liverpool Arsenal and Manchester United, will again be the teams to beat. Whether Leeds will be in the shake-up remains to be seen. But if we can add the consistency that was lacking at times last year, I know we have a squad that can challenge on all fronts.

JOURNEY THROUGH THE VALLEY OF THE KINGS

9PM SUNDAY 13th OCT

WHY THIS IS WORTH WATCHING

Forget Tutankhamen – the grandest of the 62 tombs that litter the Valley of the Kings was actually home to the sons of Rameses II. And now, 3000 years on, viewers can travel back in time and go through the keyhole of this, the world's most impressive address. The documentary, which features more visual trickery than your average Hollywood blockbuster, is part of Discovery Channel's 'Egypt Week'. Thought keeping up with the Joneses was tough? Try keeping up with the Rameseses...
